

Court Services Officer

Betsy Martin

I became a Court Services Officer because I wanted to help make my community safer. I was drawn to the idea of supporting individuals becoming productive members of society, while also ensuring public safety throughout that process.

I've always found the justice system and how it works to be fascinating. During my studies, I especially enjoyed my general law classes, which confirmed my interest in the field. Because of that interest, I chose to complete my internship at a probation office to see if this work was truly the right fit for me—and I quickly realized that it was.

Working in the field was both exciting and rewarding. No two days were ever the same, and I valued the opportunity to work directly with people from all walks of life. Seeing individuals grow, heal, and flourish after years of trauma and addiction has been one of the most meaningful parts of my career.
